ARTISTIC ability and taste of high order are required to render impressive and appropriate the mourning decoration of a great public building in token B. Marsh of Chicago. of public grief. The custom is in all respects a commendable one, and when the work is well done it expresses better than almost any other outward sign the public sorrow, and adds for the time to the architectural impressivehowever, from the sublime to the ridiculous. Nothing can be less impressive or more conspicuously absurd than mas of Vassar College for excellence drapings suggestive of a clothes-line in playing the organ. freighted with sable garments; nothing in worse taste than a lack of symmetry, a defect in proportions or demetry, a defect in proportions or decredit by the pictures she has exhibited.

Vilified and reviled, ruthlessly asmetry, a defect in proportions or de- credit by the pictures she has exhibited sign, a pervading sense of too much or too little, or a vague suggestion that a madman designed and a contortionist executed the decorations. It cannot be said that as a rule the mourning drapery now clinging to stately pillars in this city is suitably or tastefully arranged. The public does not wish to be reminded that a national edifice has in New York city. donned either a black mother-hubbard or a sombre necktie. Frightful Case of a Colored Man

I contracted a fearful case of blood poison in 1883. I was treated by some of the best physicians in Atlanta. They used the old remedies of Mercury and Potash, which brought on rheumatism and impaired my digestive organs. Every joint in me was swollen and full of pain. When I was given up to die, my physicians thought it would be a good time to test the virtue of Swift's Specific. When I commenced taking 8: S. 8. the physician said I could not live two weeks under the ordinary treatment. He commenced to give me the medicine strictly according to directions, which I continued for several months. I took nothing else, and commenced to improve from the very first. Soon the rheumatism left me, my appetite became all right, and the ulcers, which the doctor said were the most frightful he had ever seen, began to heal, and by the 1st of October, 1884, I was a well man again. I am stronger now than I ever was before, and weigh more. S. S. 8. has saved me from an early grave.

LEM McCLENDON.

Lem McClendon has been in the employ of the Chess-Carley Company for some years, and I know the above statements to be true.
